Film and History – Social Studies Elective

Open to Juniors and Seniors
1 Semester
Revised 2019

Curriculum

Course Description: This semester-long course will focus on two themes: how films portray historical events and how films reflect the society in which they are made. Students will view films from selected units (in their entirety or selected excerpts) about the United States during the 20th century and early 21st century. The class will discuss issues involving historical films such as how filmmakers take ideas from history, how a film can “rewrite history,” and how filmmakers shape a narrative. Students will understand how a message can be manipulated by different forms of media for a particular purpose. Students will also discuss and write about how films can reflect the values of an era and how films may help shape an era. Students will utilize and analyze information from a variety of media sources, both online and print, including primary and secondary texts, individual research, critical essays, and selected visual materials. By the end of the semester students will be able to identify changing views of key events in U.S. history and how the film industry portrayed them. Students will also be able to discuss/write about how Hollywood influences our perception of historical events.
Standard 6.1 U.S. History
Students will acquire the knowledge and skills to think analytically about how past and present interactions of people, cultures and environment shape the American heritage

Big Ideas: Course Objectives / Content Statement(s)
The American film industry has great influence on how the history and culture of the United States is viewed both at home and abroad. Films probably have a larger impact on our perception of our past and our culture than any other medium. Yet movies are very different from a history textbook or a newspaper. Movies are a strange combination of individual artistic vision and marketplace consensus. A film may be the subjective product of the producer, director and/or scriptwriter, but its cost and complexity force it to be a collaborative effort of hundreds of people. Most of these people are interested only in whether millions of others, the movie audience at a particular time and in history, will relate to the movie and pay to see it. Therefore, it is important for students to learn to view film with a “critical eye” in order to understand how Hollywood chooses to portray, and perhaps reshape, the American past.

Unit 1: Early Days of Hollywood: Silent & Sound Films

Suggested films:
- Birth of a Nation 1915
- Singing in the Rain 1952

Standard 6.1 U.S. History : American in the World

All students will acquire the knowledge and skills to think analytically about how past and present interactions of people, cultures, and the environment shape the American heritage. Such knowledge and skills enable students to make informed decisions that reflect fundamental rights and core democratic values as productive citizens in local, national, and global communities.

Big Ideas: Course Objectives / Content Statement(s)

The creation of film was used as a means to express the views of the director while at the same time, embodying the racial stereotypes and ethnic misunderstandings during that era.

The transition from silent films to sound reflected a technological breakthrough that would have a profound impact on American society.

Big Ideas: Course Objectives / Content Statement(s)

After the Civil War, the country turned away from sectional strife and toward the expansion of the west. The Homestead Act and the Morrill Land Grant Act helped to spur westward expansion but not at the expense of future conflict with indigenous groups.

Although the West was overrun with people looking for the American Dream, there was still a racial divide between the immigrants who belonged and those that were considered outsiders.

- Matewan (set in 1920’s) 1987
- Newsies 1992
- October Sky (set in 1950’s) 1999
- John Q 2002

Standard 6.1
All students will acquire the knowledge and skills to think analytically about how past and present interactions of people, cultures, and the environment shape the American heritage. Such knowledge and skills enable students to make informed decisions that reflect fundamental rights and core democratic values as productive citizens in local, national, and global communities.

Big Ideas: Course Objectives / Content Statement(s)
Societal and economic changes from the mid 19th Century to the early 20th Century were manifested by the worker in the attempt to create Labor Unions. The conflict between the workers and owners of industry were inevitable as a result. The role and impact of government changed over the course of time as well.

In present day, the working class is presented with many obstacles to achieve the American Dream. The working class faces problems that the elite/upper class will never face and must make dire decisions regarding the well-being of their families.

Enduring Understandings
What will students understand about the big ideas?

1. How is the Working Class portrayed in film over time?
2. What were the objectives of the worker and were their actions justified?
3. Did the development of Labor Unions destroy Capitalism?
4. Does the end always justify the means?
5. Does our justice system treat the working class the same as all citizens?

Essential Questions
What provocative questions will foster inquiry, understanding, and transfer of learning?

- How does Hollywood portray the American versus the immigrant worker?
- How did the Labor Union movement gain legitimacy?
- How does the film industry respond to societal conflict?
- How are women portrayed in the workplace and what obstacles do they face?
- How does bias and prejudice impact how society views the laborer and how Hollywood portrays the laborer.

Areas of Focus: Proficiencies (Cumulative Progress Indicators)

Students will:
6.1.12.A.5.a
6.1.12.B.5.b

Examples, Outcomes, Assessments

Instructional Focus:

1. Portrayal of the American worker over time.
1. Discuss how the Working Class is portrayed in film and how that portrayal changed throughout the 20th Century.
2. Analyze how the political situation in Hollywood may have influenced its portrayal of the working class.
3. Interpret the appeal of the wealthy lifestyle on working class families and analyze if the “American Dream” plays a role in movies about the working class.
4. Evaluate the accuracy of Hollywood’s portrayal of the working class and their life conditions.

Sample Assessments:
1. Student journal and viewing guides
2. Continuation of the stereotypes lists.
3. Comparisons of conditions of workers today i.e. day laborers.
4. iMovie/multimedia presentation demonstrating mastery of one of unit’s enduring understandings.

CCS: Make strategic use of digital media (e.g., textual, graphical, audio, visual, and interactive elements) in presentations to enhance understanding of findings, reasoning, and evidence and to add interest.

5. Periodical response: Students will be randomly assigned an approved periodical and read an article that either supports or condemns modern labor unions.

CCS: Develop claim(s) and counterclaims fairly and thoroughly, supplying the most relevant data and evidence for each while pointing out the strengths and limitations of both claim(s) and counterclaims in a discipline-appropriate form that anticipates the audience’s knowledge level, concerns, values, and possible biases.

6. Students will share their findings during a Harkness Circle to draw a conclusion about modern day labor unions.

Unit 7: The 50’s – Perfection or Perturbed?

Suggested films:

- Rebel Without a Cause 1955
- The Front (McCarthyism) 1976
- School Ties 1992
- Pleasantville 1998
- Good Night and Good Luck 2005

Standard 6.1

All students will acquire the knowledge and skills to think analytically about how past and present interactions of people, cultures, and the environment shape the American heritage. Such knowledge and skills enable students to make informed decisions that reflect fundamental rights and core democratic values as productive citizens in local, national, and global communities.

Big Ideas: Course Objectives / Content Statement(s)

The conformity of the 1950’s lead to radical change in the 1960’s. The onset of the Red Scare and the shift to individualism as well as the focus on youth created a culture of paranoia that bore itself out in youth acting out their teen angst and the government conducting hearings on suspected communist infiltration.

Racial and religious tension was about to hit an all-time high with the future 1960’s civil rights movement. The 1950’s depiction of conformity will lead to differing views of those who were not part of that conformed society.

Big Ideas: Course Objectives / Content Statement(s)
Stereotypes, ignorance and prejudice lead to discrimination and create a culture of racism. Over the course of American history African Americans have been stereotyped which has lead to racism. Hollywood has contributed to this but has also created films that have confronted racism, which has brought about a social conversation that has lead to the reduction of racism in society.

Big Ideas: Course Objectives / Content Statement(s)
Public perception of war changes over the course of time. The war in Vietnam became controversial for many reasons: from the lack of knowledge regarding the country, the lack of information distributed, the escalation and inability of the public opinion to support a war that seemed to have no end. Film makers have portrayed the war from different perspectives over the course of decades.

Media Literacy Skills

Students will be able to:

- Consume and produce various forms of media (film, television, radio, internet, etc.) as a 21st century tool to think critically and problem solve.
- Formulate questions and hypotheses from multiple perspectives, using multiple sources.
- Gather, analyze, and reconcile information from primary and secondary sources to support or reject hypotheses.
- Examine source data within the historical, social, political, geographic, or economic context in which it was created, testing credibility and evaluating bias.
- Evaluate historical and contemporary communications to identify factual accuracy, soundness of evidence, and absence of bias and discuss strategies used by the government, political candidates, and the media to communicate with the public.
- Determine whose point of view matters
- Determine how one can locate legitimate sources of information
- Analyze varying perspectives on the meaning of historical events.
- Ascertain credible and questionable sources of information about historical and contemporary events
- Analyze how public opinion is measured and used in public debate (e.g., electronic polling, focus groups, Gallup polls, newspaper and television polls) and how public opinion can be influenced by the government and the media.
- Examine ways how can citizens and groups participate effectively in the democratic process
- Understand how the U.S. view of global issues and challenges may not be the same as the views held by other countries and cultures.
